Theme

Taste of Loire hiking comprises a short, total immersion into life along the much-lauded Loire Valley in north-western France. France's longest river, you enjoy light walking through UNESCO'S 'Garden of France' whilst marvelling at some of the Hexagon's finest architectural treasures.

Taste of Loire hiking commences in Blois and finishes in Chenonceau. You also spend a night in Chaumont and Amboise. In four days you get to visit four Renaissance chateaux plus the home of Leonardo da Vinci. Enjoy The Loire's unique and multi-faceted heritage - ornate gardens, classic Renaissance architecture and a resplendent viticulture.

Chateau de Chenonceau

You enjoy half-day walks that enable you to spend plenty of time visiting the castles and other manifestations of cultural heritage in your overnight resting place. Your day-time activities are complemented by the very best of accommodation at every step of the way. That means three, fine 3-star hotels and a fabulous 4-star. We include three evening meals and allow you to choose your own restaurant in the historic centre of Amboise, where options abound.

Your first two days walking from Blois to Amboise are along the former GR3 trail largely associated with the left (or southern) bank of La Loire. Waymarked in red and white flecks, and indicated intermittently as the GR655, this demarcates the Via Turonensis (or the Tours / Paris route), one of the four northern pilgrimage routes to Saint-Jacques-de-Compostelle in France. The most serene and oldest route, it was historically the most frequented.

Your third day's walking, from Amboise to Chenonceau, sees you following a Petite Randonnée trail between the Loire and the Cher rivers. You get the chance to follow some of the legendary allées or historic linear trails along which the locals have walked since time immemorial.

Taste of Loire hiking empowers you to experiencing the unique heritage of the Loire Valley as very few others get to enjoy it - on foot, without a car or bike. Guaranteed to please, we then look forward to welcoming you back to Part Two of the Loire experience - Tours to Saumur.

Taste of Loire hiking: four-night tour itinerary

[All distances, times and elevation figures are approximate] ¹

Day 1 Arrive in Blois by train.

Early arrival recommended so as to maximize time in the Chateau Royal and enjoy a walk around the adjacent gardens - followed by a saunter around town and your first look at The Loire river.

Night in Blois and dinner in your hotel.

Day 2 Blois to Chaumont-sur-Loire.

[10½ miles-17 kms, 4½ hrs].

You are collected from your hotel and transferred a short distance out of town for your first hike along The GR655 as it wends its way along the left bank of the Loire to Chaumont via the Beuvron tributary - not to mention your first experience of Loire Valley wood-walking.

Night in Chaumont and dinner in your hotel.

Day 3 Chaumont to Amboise.

[10½ miles-17 kms, 4½ hrs].

A short transfer out of town and we climb to the giddy heights of 112 ms and enter the department of Indre-et-Loire before descending to l'Amasse, a small Loire tributary at Souvigny. Then its a mix of copse, wood and lost hamlets before arrival in Amboise. As well as the Chateau Royal and the Chapelle St Hubert, you can visit Le Clos Lucé - home of Leonardo da Vinci.

Night in Amboise and dinner in a restaurant of your own choosing - options abound.

How the French 'other half' live

Day 4 Amboise to Chenonceau.
[8 miles-13 kms, 4 hours]

A charming, bucolic hike through the Amboise forest en route to arguably the quaintest chateau and gardens of the whole week - with access secured via walking a series of the symmetrical allées, so common in these walking-oriented parts.

Night in Chenonceau and dinner in your hotel.

Day 5 End of Taste of Loire hiking tour.

Breakfast followed by check out and onward journey by train. Bonne continuation and we hope to see you next year
